A Message from our President

Our annual Wine Drawing Fund Raiser will be held on Thursday, August 18, 2011, at the Napa Senior Center. Members should have received their raffle tickets in the mail and we hope that you will be able to participate as this is our only fund raiser for the year. Raffle tickets are $5.00 each or 3 for $10.00, the same as last year. The meeting will begin at 7:00 PM at the Senior Center. We are asking members to bring a salad or hors d'oeuvres and the Society will provide pizza, drinks and a dessert. This should be another enjoyable social evening. The first prize is 50 bottles of Napa Valley Wines and there are several other prizes in the raffle. We will also be selling raffle tickets at the Wine Train Station and volunteers are needed for this. A sign-up sheet is available at the Library for working at the Wine Train Station. We hope you will be able to support our annual fund-raising effort.

We have some openings on the Board of Directors for Program Chairperson and Volunteer Chairperson. If anyone is interested in serving in one of these positions on the Board of Directors, please contact me or any member of the Board.

Blogging for Genealogy

Informative web log, aka blog, ancestryinsider.blogspot.com is the "unofficial, unauthorized view of Ancestry.com and FamilySearch.org. The Ancestry Insider reports on, defends, and constructively criticizes these two websites and associated topics. The author attempts to fairly and evenly support both." (as per the site disclaimer). The author worked for both sites and now shares some insight. You may check in at the website or subscribe to get an e-mailed edition. The one I just perused contained examples of internet citation for documenting our research as well as a critical look at the Social Security Death Records. Both articles were quite helpful.

Another website that offers a variety of informative options is Lisa Louise Cooke's Genealogy Gems found at the www.genealogygems.tv website. I have subscribed to her podcasts listening to them on my iPod for over a year. But, of course, just investigating Lisa's website is quite fun. Many of her offerings are free, such as her blog and the podcasts, but some require a "premium membership," which I have not investigated. She is a "local" from the Pleasanton area and is a popular speaker at conferences. I have heard some of her live conference podcasts (made me wish I was there!).

Happy hunting! Janice

MEMBERSHIP DUES

Please see if your name is on this list

The library is changing its dues structure to make my job and the treasurer's job a little easier. It should also reduce the amount of paperwork and postage spent. Once June 2012 rolls around, dues should be received from everyone at one time. All dues for the remaining of the year are due July 1, 2011.

In the meantime, there are many members who owe for May and June at the rate of $25, and as of June 27, I have not received a check (or cash) from the following:

Skip and Jean Keyser, Kay Arnold, Rose Clark, Kim Farmer, Betty Jean Harvego, Darlene Hoffmark, Cheri Kluever, Sharon Marangoni, James Moore, Paula Norton, Thomas Quinn, Patricia Renait, Diane Sarant, Judy Syllenskog, Arlene Stark-Pettet, Danda Winford, Janice Brown, Cheryl Jones, Loretta McDonald, Duane Murray, Mary and Sally Perkins, Jennifer Pina, Karen Scriven, and Jerome and Pat Miller.

For the remainder of 2011

By now you have probably realized that all members are getting a discounted membership rate for one year. If you have a family membership and your math skills are good, please double the amount of your discount (see below) and subtract that from $40 to establish your dues for this time period.

July – the usual $25 or $40 family rate: Barbara & Arthur Allen, Melcena Carrell, Joy Firtell, Anna Gentile, Nancy Gilien, Donald Houghton, Opal Meyers, Maxine Williams.

August, $23 – Dorothy Breitenstein, L Burton & Nancy Mahoney, Kathleen Ransford, Patricia Salyer, Charles & Janet Shearer, Norma Tracy, Chris Burditt, Karen Burzdak, Eric Giboney, Lynne Harrington-Bullock, Joanna Mills, Louise Throop, Hope Turgeon.

Overview of the "Oregon Trail"

The Oregon Trail is a 2,000-mile (3,200 km) historic east-west wagon route that connected the Missouri River to valleys in Oregon and locations in between. It flourished from the 1840s until the coming of the railroad at the end of the 1860s. The trip on foot took four to six months. It was the oldest of the northern commercial and emigrant trails and was originally discovered and used by fur trappers and traders in the fur trade from about 1811 to 1840. In its earliest days, much of the future Oregon Trail was not passable to wagons but was passable everywhere only to men walking or riding horses and leading mule trains. By 1836, when the first Oregon wagon trains were organized at Independence, Missouri, the trail had been improved so much that it was possible to take wagons to Fort Hall, Idaho. By 1843 a rough wagon trail had been cleared to The Dalles, Oregon, and by 1846 all the way around Mount Hood to the Willamette Valley in the state of Oregon. What became called the Oregon Trail was complete even as improved roads, "cutouts", ferries and bridges made the trip faster and safer almost every year.

After 1840 steam-powered riverboats and steamboats traversing up and down the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers sped settlement and development in the flat region from the Appalachian mountains to the American Rocky Mountains. The boats serviced the jumping off points for wagon trains that crossed the mountains headed to rich farmlands in Oregon and California. With disputes with Spain and Britain settled by 1848, the new lands proved highly attractive. Getting there by sea meant either a very long trip around South America or through Panama—both were expensive and dangerous and took longer than walking.

The eastern part of the Oregon Trail spanned part of the future state of Kansas and nearly all of what are now the states of Nebraska and Wyoming. The western half of the trail spanned most of the future states of Idaho and Oregon. From various "jumping off points" in Missouri, Iowa or Nebraska, the routes converged along the lower Platte River Valley, near Fort Kearny, Nebraska Territory. Small steamboats carrying fur traders navigated the Missouri River up to the Yellowstone River in Montana as early as 1832. Larger steamboats traveling much above St. Joseph were blocked until dredging opened a bigger channel in 1852.

Oregon Trail travelers could purchase repairs, new supplies, fresh teams and help from fort-trading posts such as Fort Kearny and Fort Laramie. Jim Bridger's Fort Bridger and Hudson's Bay Company owned: Fort Hall and Fort Boise in Idaho; Fort Nez Perces (Fort Walla Walla) in Oregon and Fort Vancouver in Washington. Other supplies, fresh teams and repairs could often be obtained from temporary trading posts and ferries set up by entrepreneurs along the trail during the traveling season. From the early to mid 1830s, but especially after the organization of the first large wagon trains in Independence, Missouri in 1841 and through the epoch years 1846–1869 the Oregon Trail and its many off shoots was used by about 400,000 settlers, ranchers, farmers, miners, and businessmen and their families. The eastern half of the trail was also used by travelers on the California Trail (from 1843), Bozeman Trail (from 1863), and Mormon Trail (from 1847) which used many of the same eastern trails before turning off to their separate destinations.

Once the first transcontinental railroad by the Union Pacific and the Central Pacific was completed in 1869, the use of this trail by long distance travelers fell off because the train took seven days and at $69 was much cheaper. Travelers going to Oregon could take the train to California and catch a coastal steamer to Oregon. By 1883 the Northern Pacific Railroad had reached Portland, Oregon, and thereafter there were less and less wagon trains each year along the western trail. The legacy persisted as highways such as Interstate 80 followed the same course westward and passed through towns originally established to service the Oregon Trail.

To complete the journey in one traveling season most travelers left in April to May—as soon as there was enough grass for forage for the animals and the trails dried out. To meet the constant need for water, grass, and fuel for campfires the trail followed various rivers and streams across the continent. The network of trails required little initial preparation to be made passable for wagons. People using the trail traveled in wagons, pack trains, on horseback, on foot, and sometimes by raft or boat to establish new farms, lives, and businesses in the Oregon Country.
